Do you need to undertake a professional development program?

The answer is yes if one of the following applies to you:

- ▶ You often feel out of your depth in dealing with the challenges in your current position
- ▶ You are a young professional with a qualification in engineering, IT, construction, business, architecture and planning to acquire project management, business management and leadership skills
- ▶ You are a professional woman wanting to develop your management and leadership skills while on leave or upon returning to employment
- ▶ You are a mid career professional wishing to upgrade your professional knowledge and expertise in business, project, program, portfolio & organisation management
- ▶ You are a member of the Australian Institute of Project Management and wish to earn the required number of CPD points (ask about special rates for AIPM members)
- ▶ You are a member of PMI and hold a PMP or ProgMP qualification and need to gain the required number of professional development units (ask about special rates for PMI members)
- ▶ You are a member of Engineers Australia and wish to achieve certification under their project management or engineering executive schemes (ask about special rates for EA members)
- ▶ You are a member of other professional bodies and wish to achieve certification under their criteria

Which qualification suits your needs?

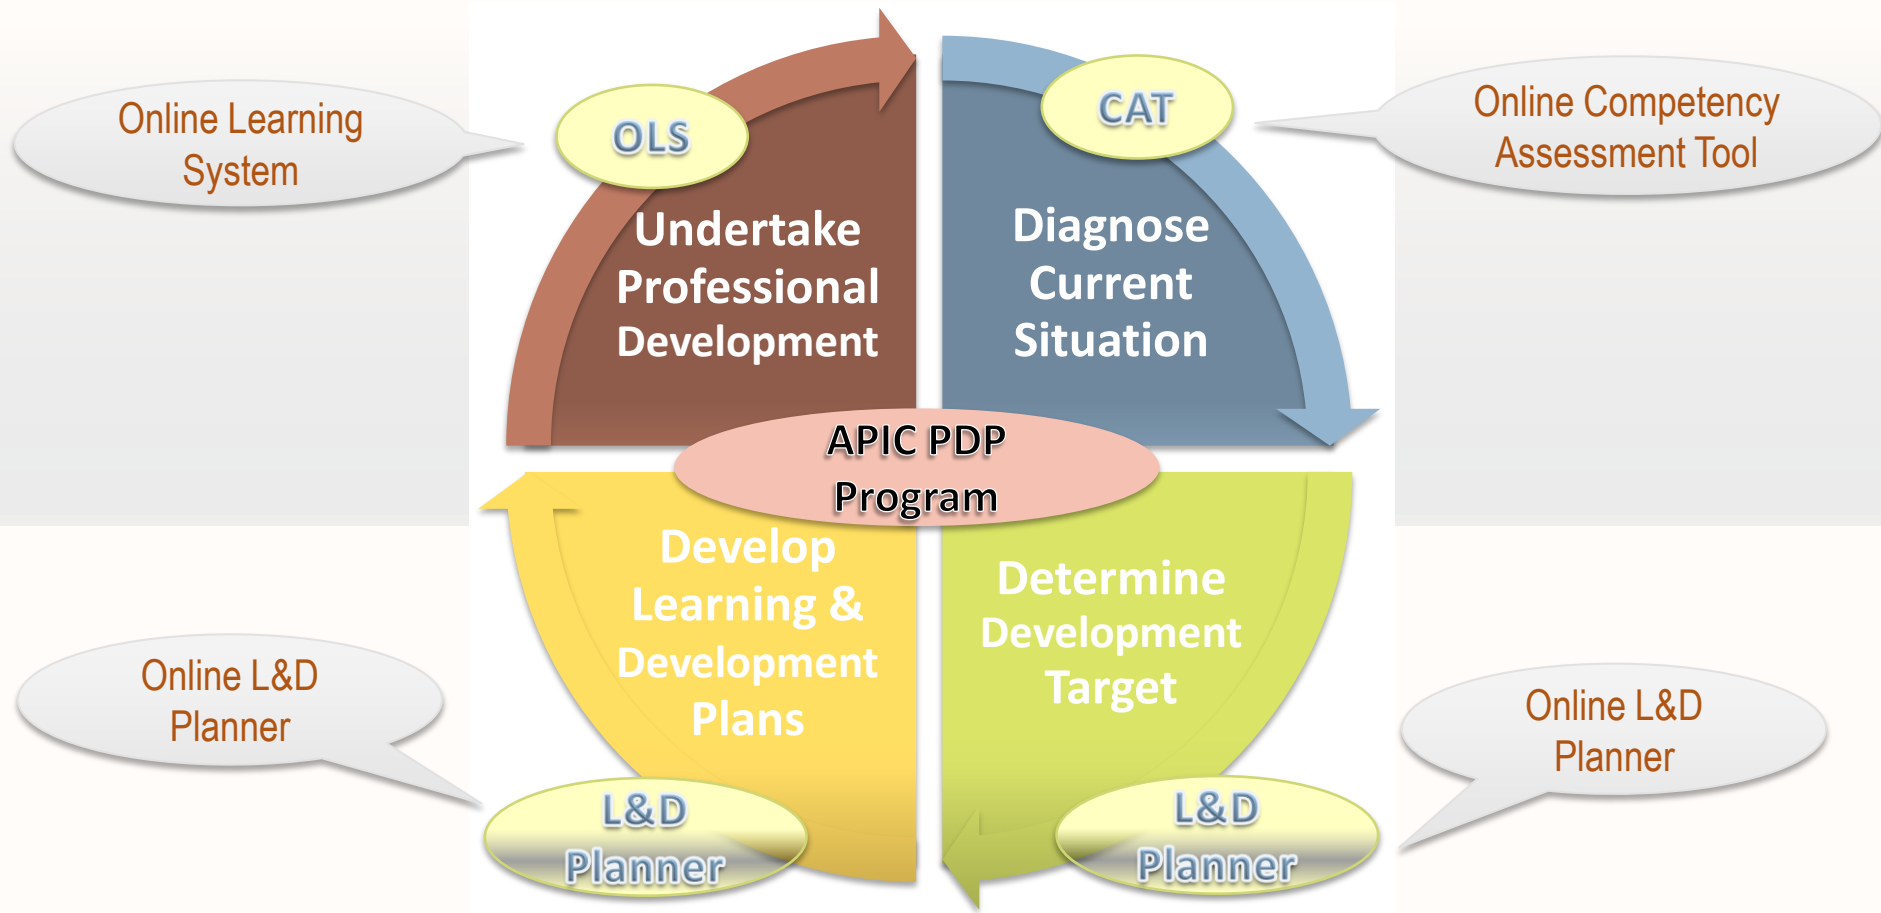

Our PDP process helps you make the right choice

- ▶ It allows individuals to develop their L&D Plans
- ▶ First you set career goals and development targets
- ▶ Then you undertake competency assessment using our tools
- ▶ Then you obtain your competency scorecard
- ▶ You proceed to evaluate opportunities incl. APIC programs to address the gaps
- ▶ Using our tools you turn it into a personal L&D plan
- ▶ You implement the plan & achieve your goals and we will support you throughout the period

APIC has smart tools to facilitate PDP process
